

Journal of Management Inquiry

The invention is table search device having a table that has a plurality of entries and a cache having a subset of entries of the plurality of entries of the table. A search engine is configured to first search the cache in a first number of search cycles and then search the table in a second number of search cycles based on search results of the cache. The search engine connected to the table and the cache.